

International Health and Development

INHL 6800: INTRODUCTION TO POPULATION STUDIES

Learning Objectives:

At the end of the course the student will be able to:

1. Define and describe key dimensions of population size, growth, and distribution.
2. State and critique key theoretical and policy positions regarding the causes and consequences of population change.
3. Calculate and interpret key demographic measures.